No one knows how much we miss you.
No one knows the bitter pain
We have suffered since we lost you.
Life has never been the same.
In our hearts your memory lingers,
sweetly, tender fond and true.
There's not a day,
That we do not think of you.
Life her is empty without you.
Our eyes shed many tears,
Since the day you passed away.
In my heart your memory lingers and will stay from day to day.
Sleep on dear father and with angels bright and fair and with God's help we will need you in Heaven so bright.

Caring for ceramic tile

By SHIRLEY W. WALTON
Extension Agent

The is Part 2 of a two-part article on the use and care of ceramic tile in the home. I wish to continue discussing this week how to take care of the various types of tile in the home and particularly how to take care of stains and spills on the tile.

Unglazed ceramic tile is a durable rustic-looking tile that is often found in hard use areas, such as countertops, window sills, and fireplaces, as well as floors and walls. One form, ceramic mosaics, measures only an inch or two per piece. These solid porcelin tiles are stain-proof and practically indestructible. Quarry tiles, another form of unglazed ceramic tile, come in larger pieces that can also withstand a lot of stress. Consequently, it is most frequently used on floors, and the most familiar is the earthy red, six-inch square tiles. Many people have used this tile on kitchen floors. Unglazed ceramic tiles develop a patina as they wear so they are easier to maintain as they age. Personally, I think they look prettier after they have some age on them.

Ceramic mosaics should be wiped regularly with a damp sponge for walls or a sponge mop for the floor, using a diluted solution of a household cleaner. Usually this is the only maintenance required. If heavy-duty cleaning is necessary, especially for a kitchen wall, scour mosaic tile walls with cleanser and a wet sponge or a concentrated solution of a household cleaner. For floors, mix water and scouring powder into a paste. Mop the paste over the floor. Leave it for five minutes and then scrub vigorously with a brush. A deck brush, purchased locally at the hardware stores, is a great type of brush to use for this job. Rinse thoroughly and wipe dry. Should you have any residue left from the scouring powder, you may wish to vacuum over the floor after it is thoroughly dry.

Quarry tile floors should be mopped occasionally with a household cleaner and rinsed thoroughly. Heavy-duty cleaning of quarry tile is also accomplished with a scrub brush and a concentrated all-purpose cleaning solution or a scouring paste. Again, rinse well with clear water and wipe dry.

Grout, the material used between the tiles, gives the finishing touch to an installation. Grout materials include Portland cement, epoxies and white silicon rubber. Some are available in colors to add a decorating touch and the newest types offer joints that are water-proof, mildew resistant and easy to clean.

Grout joints in counter or vanity tops are susceptible to many types of stains. They can be treated with a sealer to help keep them clean. Acrylic joint sealers are available at local hardware stores for that purpose. All the application of three consecutive coats of lemon oil furniture polish is another way to seal grout joints. East coat should be allowed to dry for one hour before apply the next. Excess polish should be removed from the glazed tile or ceramic mosaic, using a damp sponge.

Mildew of grout joints, as well as tiles in the bathroom areas, may occur, particulary in shower stalls. Conditions are ideal when the shower splatters of soap, shampoo and other bathing products combine with warm humid atmosphere of a poorly ventilated shower stall. In most instances, the use of a mildew stain remover or a scrubbing with a stiff brush and a household cleaner removes the stains. For the very stubborn stains, use an applicaiton of chlorine bleach. ½ cup of chlorine bleach to one quart of warm water is suggested. You may also wish to use a paste of a scouring powder with chlorine bleach in it and leave it on about five or six hours. Then scrub it off thoroughly, rinsing and drying.

Other stains on ceramic tile and grout also may require additonal treatment. In the case of nail polish, the stain removing compound is acetone or nail polish remover. If the stain remains, use a chlorine bleach solution. Food, tea, coffee and fruit stains may also be removed with a household cleanser and hot water, followed by an application of chlorine bleach or hydrogen peroxide. Rinse well and dry.

Try removing colored dyes and inks by applying chlorine bleach, letting the solution stand until the stain disappears and making sure the surface is always wet. Rinse thoroughly and dry. Mercurochrome can also be removed with a chlorine bleach. This seems to be an easy to spill first aid measure that we use particularly on little children's cuts and scratches.

Iodine, on the other hand, should be scrubbed away with ammonia. Be certain NEVER to mix chlorine bleach and ammonia. Noxious fumes will result.

Chewing gum, tar and wax should all be chilled with an ice cube before attempting removal. Use a wooden tongue depressor or a kitchen knife to remove by scraping any excess of these three items. Then remmove the residue with a non-flammable paint stripper. Always follow label directions and precautions when using any kind of cleaning solution. After using any of these, be sure to rinse well and dry thoroughly.

The winter snows will soon be over and all of us will be thinking about giving our homes that special spring cleaning. I hope these two articles on use and care of ceramic tile in your home will be helpful as you tackle the spring cleaning jobs.

About life insurance

By OCIE M. MACK
Extension Agent

According to the American Council of Life Insurance, very few individuals are "rated" today. It is easier than ever for a person to buy life insurance in the United States, regardless of his or her health or profession.

When life insurance was first offered to Americans in 1759, people in poor health or in a type of work considered "dangerous," could not get insurance. By the late 1800's, such people were sometimes able to get insurance but were "rated," charged extra for their insurance.

Now, however, many who have had serious illnesses that are now under control can buy life insurance at regular rates.

According to a national survey by the Life Insurance Marketing and Research Association, only one person in 34 who purchased ordinary life insurance in 1981 was "rated" and had to pay higher premiums.

WHAT TO ASK ABOUT FAMILY INSURANCE

How much life insurance is needed for your family? The best way to find the right figure is to discuss the following questions with your spouse and life insurance representative:

1. Should you die, would there be money to pay immediate expenses such as medical and funeral bills, unpaid taxes, outstanding bills and legal fees?
2. Is there money to pay your home mortgage? (If you have mortgage insurance to cover the outstanding balance, you can count on it being paid in one sum.)
3. How much would the family need each month for housing, food, clothing and other living expenses? Find the answer by preparing a budget based on the least it would take for them to live reasonably well for the foreseeable future.
4. Should something be set aside for a special goal such as putting your children through college? This can be managed through savings, investments and life insurance.

As a last step, review your present resources. For instance, if you are covered by social security, your family could receive a monthly income based on a percentage of your earnings and the number of dependents. If fortunate, your family may be able to count on money coming in from investments, interest earnings or from property you own.

Also, don't overlook employee benefits such as group life, health and disability insurance policies and pension plans.
